

As an architecture and design firm, the renovated building will show off KZF's abilities to potential clients.

"An added benefit is the opportunity for KZF Design to reuse an existing building and be able to showcase the beneficial aspects of a sustainable workplace to our clients and the Downtown community," Sharp says.

Continuing growth led to the need for a new building, which will give the firm 30 percent more space than they currently have at the Baldwin Building in Walnut Hills.

"KZF Design is very diversified with deep expertise in multiple markets, which makes it adept at growing and prospering regardless of changes in the economy," says president and CEO William H. Wilson III in a media release. "We are involved in a number of joint ventures and consulting arrangements and have projects in many states. All of this keeps our business growing."

Writer: Kevin LeMaster

Source: Tim Sharp, vice president, KZF Design

Photography by Scott Beseler

 ARCHITECTURE , ENVIRONMENT , GREEN BUILDING , INTERIOR DESIGN , SUSTAINABILITY

 DOWNTOWN

CONTACT US | PRIVACY POLICY | TERMS OF USE | SIGNUP FOR E-ZINE | SOAPBOX LINKS | HAVE A TIP FOR US? | ABOUT SOAPBOX | RSS